

12 Magnetic levitation

Magnetic levitation is not a new thing. This is a technique which uses a magnetic field to defy the gravitational force and allows objects not to have physical contact with the surface. It is already in use, and some trains use this technique. The main advantage of this technique is that there is no friction, and theoretically, there are no limits in achieving high speed using magnetic levitation.